Case study 1 – real-life

- Every five years the Government has to submit a report to the United Nations stating what they are doing to protect children's rights.
- In 2008, a group of children complained to the United Nations in Geneva as part of Get ready for change! which is a project run by the Children's Rights Alliance for England (CRAE).
- They highlighted that the UK Government was failing to protect their right to play under the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child.
- They also made 14 other recommendations to make sure children's human rights are fully protected and respected in England.
- The young people made a real difference as the Government made several changes, including further investment into play areas.
